GOLF TIP OF THE MONTH

This game can be simplified to 10 words. Those 10 words are: Weight Forward, Shoulder Down, Hands In, Straight Arms and Tucked Hips! This is a systematic way of learning the game that anyone can follow.

This month's tip is for the Straight Arms element of the system.

This element is a lot about radius control during the golf swing. For example, let's say the distance at address from your left thumb (assuming that you are right handed golfer) to your chin is 36 inches. That distance should remain the same when the shaft of the club is halfway back, at the top of the backswing, half way down, at impact and half way through. As you can probably visual the distance from your left thumb to your chin remains the same throughout the golf swing. This control will go a long way to improve your consistency and quality of contact. Check out this image to see the proper visual to make this happen.

This will help you hit the ball farther and straighter. Good luck and good golfing! Visit my site www.bobschade.com for more information.
